A veteran lawyer with more than twenty years of experience working on affordable housing transactions, Ken Gross' experience spans both routine and complex transactions, including mixed-use and mixed-income developments, HOPE VI and other mixed finance projects, FHA-insured financing, and projects combining the low-income housing and rehabilitation tax credits. Ken's clients include syndicators, investors, and developers of real estate projects using federal and state low-income housing and historic tax credits. He is one of two lead counsel for a major syndicator of low-income housing and tax credits.

Ken is a certified public accountant in the State of Maryland. Prior to joining the firm, he served as a judicial law clerk to the Honorable Murray M. Schwartz, Chief Judge of the United States District Court for the District of Delaware and he practiced in two large law firms in New York City and Baltimore.
