A member of Gallagher's Real Estate and Business Transactions Practice Group, Nick works with developers and lenders on affordable housing projects. He has also represented investment and commercial banks in financing transactions and public and private companies in connection with leveraged financing transactions.

Prior to joining Gallagher, Nick worked for a New York-based international law firm, representing investment banks, private equity firms, and public companies in various domestic transactions.

Nick earned his law degree from the University of North Carolina School of Law, and served as an editor with the North Carolina Journal of International Law. During his final semester of law school, Nick served as a legal intern with the United States Attorneys' Office for the Eastern District of North Carolina, where he gained exposure to nuanced prosecutorial practices of the U.S. Government through drafting briefs with the Fourth Circuit. He was a judicial intern for the Honorable Cheri Lynn Beasley, North Carolina Supreme Court (2015).

Beyond Gallagher

A former professional soccer player with the North American Soccer League, Nick enjoys watching competitive sports such as English Premier League football and professional collegiate basketball. He also enjoys going on hikes with his two German shepherds.
